

Raider Learning Communities

What are the Raider Learning Communities?

The Raider Learning Communities (RLC) are courses that are linked together and/or share a common cohort of students. General Education courses have been paired to form communities. Since each community is made up of the same people, you get to know your classmates very easily.

Why should you participate in RLC courses?

Research shows that students in learning communities have a higher GPA overall and are more apt to continue their higher education until graduation. RLCs offer opportunities for increased social and academic interactions. Since the students in one class are also in the other, forming study groups and meeting friends can be very simple.

What classes are involved in the program?

The Raider Learning Communities classes for Fall 2009 are all courses that count towards a student's general education requirements. Therefore, regardless of your major, you can participate. See listing of RLC paired courses for specific classes offered.

How do you sign up???

1. Decide the RLC in which you wish to participate.
2. Talk to an Advisor about your interest in that community.
3. Find the Course Reference Number (CRN) for the courses you wish to enroll.
4. Enter the CRN on your RaiderNet registration page. Remember you have to register for both classes at the same time or you will get a registration error.
5. Ask an Advisor for help if you have questions or are having trouble adding the courses.

The Academic Support Center coordinates the Raider Learning Communities Program. Should you have questions, you may contact our office at 898-2339 or e-mail Heather Spell Arrington at harring@mtsu.edu.

We hope you will choose to participate in this great program!!
