The Virginia Peck Trust

The Virginia Peck Trust was bequeathed to the university for use by the English Department in 1991, following Virginia’s death, for the purpose of furthering the mission of the department and enriching our students’ educational experience in ways that might not otherwise be possible within the constraints of our normal budget. Since 1992 the fund has provided honoraria for visiting writers, scholars, and artists, funding for workshops on improving departmental instruction, funding for student writing awards sponsored by the department, and occasional supplemental support for conferences, journals, and educational outreach activities sponsored by the English Department.
