From MTSU Alumni Relations

Have you been to mtalumni.com lately? We've got a great new look! Along with our new look is a convenient way to stay connected to all of those former classmates and friends from your time at MTSU.

Graduates call the Office of Alumni Relations every day looking for former classmates and friends from their time at MTSU. To accommodate all the requests and give graduates a new way to reconnect with their alma mater, the Alumni Relations office has launched a new Web site and online community at www.MTAlumni.com.

The new community allows you to:

- create and customize your own profile page, where you can control the layout, colors and content of your page, add news feeds, YouTube videos, Flickr photos, and much more;
 - search for fellow alumni in the password-protected alumni directory and e-mail them, send them an instant note or add them to your friends list;
 - post and view photos;
 - post and view class notes, like wedding and birth announcements;
 - communicate via message boards and chat rooms;
 - register for events and much more.
- "We are excited about the capabilities the new community offers our graduates," said Ginger Freeman, director of Alumni Relations. "Now more than ever, alumni are looking for instantaneous communication with friends and the university. The online community provides both. We hope this gives us the opportunity to look at other forms of communication to better serve our alumni."

On the horizon are many more features including online credit card event payment, user blogs, ways to post your resumes and jobs, and much more.

To access the new online community the first time, you must have your MTSU ID # (aka M#). You will find it on the address label in this issue of

Moving forward despite significant budget cuts

Initiatives put in place to strengthen university's focus toward the future

By Tonja L. Johnson tjohnso@mtsu.edu

As 2009 monthly revenue reports for the State of Tennessee continue to show noticeable decreases over last year's figures, MTSU President Sidney A. McPhee stresses the importance of continuing to moving forward with plans that are being developed to deal with significant budget reductions, which are set to take effect July 1, 2011.

"Over the past several months, we have continued to watch state revenue figures plummet, and state officials are, once again, discussing possible layoffs and cuts in state agency budgets for the coming fiscal year," said McPhee. "While we would prefer to focus our attention on more positive trends, the current economic conditions in the state leave us no choice but to continue our efforts to address how we can effectively operate with significantly fewer state dollars."

The university's state appropriation for 2009-10 has been reduced from $94.9 mil-

The Lunch with the President series continued in April. President Sidney A. McPhee visited with alumni and friends in Brentwood, Tenn., and discussed the current university budget. He also answered questions from alumni and updated them on current MTSU happenings.

lion to $75.6 million but will be supplemented by one-time stimulus funds and state resources for the next two years. Starting fiscal year 2011-12, MTSU must be prepared to operate with a $19.3 million budget reduction without the aforementioned additional funding.

Sharing details of how the university will reduce its budget, while making every effort to maintain academic quality and retain key personnel, has been a major area of focus for McPhee and his executive team for the past several months.

"We have attempted to be as open as we can about where we are and what must be done," said McPhee. "We have provided a wide variety of forums to not only educate our constituents about the challenging economic issues that we are facing but also to acquire feedback on how we might appropriately address those issues."

In April, during a "Lunch with the President" event organized by the university's Alumni Relations office, McPhee gave a presentation on MTSU's Positioning the University for the Future Initiative to alumni. He provided an overview of critical budget issues, discussed how MTSU plans to address future budget reductions and answered questions from the audience. He has given similar presentations during the past several weeks to other groups such as MTSU's National Alumni Association Board, the University Foundation Board and the MTSU Dames Club.

Additional opportunities for alumni to receive direct updates from the president related to pending budget reductions and positioning MTSU for the future will be provided via the alumni Web site and through a variety of events that are to be scheduled during the upcoming academic year.

Summer Reading Program for new freshmen

How Starbucks Saved My Life author will speak at Aug. 30 University Convocation

From staff reports

Summer readers can get a boost from MTSU's Summer Reading 2009 title, How Starbucks Saved My Life: A Son of Privilege Learns to Live Like Everyone Else, by Michael Gates Gill, as they prepare for the fall 2009 semester.

Gill

Incoming freshmen are expected to read the book before fall classes start Aug. 29, and all University 1010 classes will discuss the selection.

Faculty members are asked to incorporate the book into their classes when possible.

"As you prepare and/or revise your syllabi for the fall semester, please keep the MTSU Summer Reading Program in mind," said Dr. Laurie Witherow ('99), director of the Academic Support Center at MTSU. "This program's success depends on the involvement of the faculty who make use of the Summer Reading selection in fall classes.

"Students come to us in the fall expecting to discuss the Summer Reading selection in classes and use it as the basis of assignments. How Starbucks Saved My Life would be a perfect starting point for discussions on a wide range of topics and is especially recommended for use in communications, education, psychology, sociology, business and English courses," Witherow continued.

"All new students are required to read the book prior to their arrival on campus in the fall, so How Starbucks Saved My Life may be perfect as the basis for an early writing or other assignment. The students will be expecting to discuss their summer reading book from a variety of perspectives."

Faculty who want to use the book in their classrooms may contact Witherow at 615-898-2339 or lwithero@mtsu.edu for a review copy.

Faculty and staff also are being encouraged to read the book and to join students at the University Convocation on Sunday, Aug. 30, at 2 p.m. in Murphy Center, when Gill will serve as the keynote speaker for the opening of the 2009-10 academic year.

The Summer Reading Program, created in 2002, aims to provide a unifying experience for entering freshmen, give them a chance to read and interact with acclaimed authors and affirm the importance of reading for a successful and fulfilling life.

Dolores Gresham, R-Somerville, left, and State Rep. Harry Brooks, R-Knoxville, during an informal April 2 visit to campus to learn more about Tennessee's fastest-growing university. After lunch, the president took the legislators, who chair their respective education committees in the legislature, on a driving tour of campus. They saw the new Health, Wellness and Recreation Center and MTSU Campus Pharmacy, took a turn on the new roundabout and viewed the sites of the future student union, College of Education building and the proposed science building.

Perlick named MTSU's director of development

By Randy Weiler jweiler@mtsu.edu

After conducting an eight-month national search, MTSU found new Director of Development Nick Perlick right in its backyard.

Perlick, 31, a Pittsburgh native and former development director and officer at Ohio State University from 2003 to 2005, moves to MTSU after serving as the Middle Tennessee Medical Center Foundation's executive director since December 2006.

Perlick

"I'm very excited to be here," said Perlick, who started March 23. "Most of my previous experience has been in higher education at large state universities. I'm hopeful that some of the things I learned at those institutions we can bring here to help MTSU.

"In the first few weeks," he added, "I have found the staff in Development and University Relations to be a wonderful group of people. They have been great to work with so far."

In his position, Perlick will oversee an office of 10 people, which includes development directors who work with the colleges of Basic and Applied Sciences, Business, Continuing Education and Distance Learning, Liberal Arts, Education and Behavioral Science and Mass Communication; an assistant director and coordinator for annual giving; an executive aide; and a secretary.

Joe Bales, vice president for Development and University Relations, said he is pleased with the selection of Perlick and his decision to accept the job's challenges.

"We're extremely excited to have Nick here," Bales said. "The diversity of experiences he brings, having worked at two major institutions (Ohio State and Florida State universities) and the hospital, is an added dimension.

"He will bring new ideas and perspectives to our program and help provide the highest service to our donors and alumni. He will be a great fit for us."

Perlick said development's "primary job is to raise private funding for a wide variety of university needs."

In light of current economic times, Perlick said he knows the challenge will be great.

"Clearly, the great challenge the university is facing now is similar for us in development," he said. "The alumni and donor prospects we will be engaging are facing the same economic difficulties the university is facing.

"Interestingly, what we're going through provides a unique opportunity to strengthen our case for support. Never before have we needed philan-

Having a zoo-rific time

The Nashville Zoo at Grassmere welcomed MTSU alumni for the third year to "paint the zoo blue." Alumni, friends and their families enjoyed all the animals, a picnic lunch and good fellowship. "This event allows our alums to have a great day out with their families at a reasonable cost, not to mention time to reconnect with their former MTSU classmates," said Paul Wydra, assistant director for Alumni Relations. 'Thank you,' alumni, for continued support

My tenure as president of the MTSU National Alumni Association is drawing to a close, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you for your continued support of this great university.

One of the ways that MTSU remains a leader in higher education in the state is through the support of our alumni.

Through the years, we have observed alumni "making things happen" with their generous gifts of money and time. Please be assured your support is appreciated and it does make a difference.

On a more personal note, I would like to express my gratitude to the current board and committees who have worked so diligently this year. Your support of our agenda and your officers have made this a successful year for all of us. I have enjoyed renewing friendships and meeting new Blue Raider supporters. As I reflect on the year, there were so many individuals who worked on numerous events that my space is too limited for me to thank all of you by name:

To all members of the MTSU Family, I say a big thank you. I have enjoyed my work with you, and I remain grateful for the opportunity to promote our university.

2008-09 MTSU National Alumni Association President Mary Esther Reed is a 1992 graduate living in Smyrna, Tenn., with her husband, Britt ('93), and son, Parker. She has been owner of The Learning Circle in Murfreesboro since 2002.

Alumni Association scholarship honors an MTSU education

MTSU Alumni Relations

The MTSU Alumni Association is proud to announce the first recipients of the newly established Alumni Legacy Scholarship.

The Alumni Legacy Scholarship was created to honor the legacy of an MTSU education and is awarded to children of alumni who are sophomores and above at MTSU.

Two recipients received the scholarship for the 2009-10 academic year.

Lindsey Sharp is the daughter of MTSU alumna Lori Ann Sharp ('97) of Mt. Juliet and is a chemistry major. Rebekah Horton is the daughter of MTSU alumna Kelley Horton ('93) of Nashville and is a double major of instrumental performance and political science.

Both women will receive a $1,000 scholarship for the upcoming school year.

The scholarship is funded by donations raised through the annual Alumni Legacy Golf Classic as well as private donations from alumni. The Alumni Legacy Golf Classic will be held on the afternoon of Sept. 25, 2009, at Indian Hills Golf Course.

For more information about the Alumni Legacy Scholarship, donating to the scholarship or supporting it through playing or sponsoring the Golf Classic, please visit mtalumni.com or call Michelle Stepp at 615-898-2922.
